Except for information collected in our Contact Us pages no personally identifiable information is collected from visitors to our web site. However, in our Contact Us pages there are fields provided for your name and email address. Providing your name and email address to us on our Contact Us page is completely optional; however, it is requested if in the event you desire a response from us. Names and email addresses provided on our Contact Us pages will only be used for the sole purpose of replying to you and will be held in the strictest form of confidence. Moreover, names and email addresses submitted on our Contact Us pages will never be rented nor sold to a third party. Besides, collecting information such as an email address then aggregating and selling it to a third party is not good business practice.

Moreover, if you post a comment to a blog entry at the Blogs of the Edward Ringwald Websites, a Facebook account is required to comment. Any Facebook login stays on Facebook and your activities on Facebook are subject to Facebook's privacy policies as well as their Community Guidelines.
